The Book of Job has inspired and challenged philosophers, theologians, playwrights, artists, and writers for generations. Whether the story is true or a parable, it raises one of life’s biggest existential questions—“why do the righteous suffer?”

Boils! Satan! Destruction! Fantastic descriptions of the universe! As an impressionable teen, award-winning printmaker Linda Nesvisky walked into this subject and never turned away. The forty prints on view in this exhibition reflect the artist’s fascination with this timeless theme in a combination of imagery and the written word.

Printmaking Workshop with artist Linda Nesvisky
Sunday March 8, 1–3 pm
Art Academy of Cincinnati
1212 Jackson Street

Join exhibition artist Linda Nesvisky for a workshop using the facilities of the print department at the Art Academy of Cincinnati.

Registration and $5 materials fee required.

To register: Call Jen Mendelson at 513.487.3098 or online at https://donate.huc.edu/Book-of-Job-Prints. Space limited.