BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH

Benas Levy was born around 1849, a date tentatively established from information contained in Festschrift zur...Benas Levy (Berlin 1922). He was a prominent figure in the cotton goods and apparel business and an important member of the Fasanenstrasse Synagogue in Berlin. Since 1899 he was a liberal member of the Repräsentanten-Vesammlung of the Berlin Jewish community (See Mitteilungen Über die Verwaltung der jüdischen Gemeinde zu Berlin, 1916). He was also a member of the Vorstand der jüdischen Gemeinde. In addition to his commercial and community pursuits, he was the author of several books and articles. It is the work of the two community governing bodies, as well as Levy's association with them, that are documented in this collection. Because of the lack of more secondary material about him, little else can be said of his life or activities.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Most of the documents in the BENAS LEVY COLLECTION relate to the administration of the multifarious activities of the Juedische Gemeinde zu Berlin. The vast majority of documents are recommendations made by the Repraesentantenversammlung. These may concern as trivial a matter as a request for an appropriation for an umbrella lost by a worshipper in a synagogue's wardrobe room to the planning of a new synagogue or the engagement of a rabbi. Even though there are several agendas of meetings of the Repraesentatenversammlung, the BENAS LEVY COLLECTION does not tell the researcher anything about the fate of the Vorstand's recommendations, since it contains no minutes of the Repraesentantenversammlung.

However, the collection shows ample evidence of the widespread activities of Germany's largest Gemeinde. Truly, it was not merely a Kultusgemeinde but tended to be much more of a Kehillah. In addition to the need for synagogues and cemeteries, for rabbis, cantors, teachers, and support personnel, the BENAS LEVY COLLECTION reflects activities in the field of culture. Not only religious, but also parochial schools were maintained, and there was a central Jewish Library.

Furthermore, there was a network of social and philanthropic services, such as special grants and care for the indigent, orphanages, hospitals, old age homes, and subventions for transients, presumably Jews from Eastern Europe on their way to America.

The personnel assignment sheets, particularly for the High Holy Days, including rabbis, cantors, organists, choir-directors, sextons, and gabbai' im give some impression of the vastness of the community and its religious needs for the special occasions in the Fall. For Passover, Matzot and other dietary requirements were provided for those confined in penal institutions in Berlin and vicinity.

On various occasions, voluntary grants for retired employees or widows and other dependents of deceased employees were recommended by the Vorstand, actions which seem to reflect a truly humanitarian spirit.

The members of the Vorstand, chairmen and members of commissions frequently have academic degrees and honorific titles such as M.D., J.D., Ph.D., Justizrat, Kammerzienrat, Geheimrat and others. Apparently, they were more often than not members of the wealthy upper or upper middle class.
