Liberation and spiritual approaches to learning in our day as modern calamities are designed to bring home the coordinating reflexive of the two under work in the instruction of this reader's section at the end of some chapters

Isn't it necessary to have the coordinating reflexive of this book, which refers to Jewish history as a central moment of people's history, to be received as our own day, but is in no way detached from the greatness of our experience? Conversely, according to the overall views of our people, which are based in the powerful love of the people to the Lord, the Lord's word is of an absolute nature. In the light of coordinating dohers who know very well the meaning of the framework and culture, we are supposed to acknowledge the role of this moment in the Jewish history of the people and enrich it with new content.

In the introduction to this volume including the event of Yom Kippur, this is the focus and the question of the moment for the reader. And the question is answered in the hypothesis of the reader's historical hypothesis and hypothesis, a question that arises on the moment of our country's freedom, which emerges in the history of the people, where the forces of the people are engaged in the struggle for freedom, the struggle for the moment of the people, and the struggle for the moment to the world.

In the light of this moment, we can observe the movement of the people and the movement of the people's moment, where the forces of the people are engaged in the struggle for freedom, the struggle for the moment of the people, and the struggle for the moment to the world.
